GRAND MOTHER Used herbs in doctoring the family, and her simple remedies DID CURE in most cases. #### Special Farming.

Specialists in the various branches of the science of agriculture are quite as necessary as specialists in any other science. It is by the labors and research es of persons who devote their attenion to one branch of study that the most rapid and marked science and art. Sir John Lubbock, the English naturast, often devotes weeks and months to he patient study and careful observaion of a single colony of ants, or of a ew imprisoned wasps or other insects. Other men have given years to the study Harter's Iron Tonic. of a single phenomenon of nature-men like Newton, Davy, and Agassiz. And the result of such study and observation has been the marvellous discoveries and the wonderful inventions and improvements of the present day.

And so to specialists in agriculture do we owe many of the most useful inventions and improvements in that department. The best stock-begeders, but er-makers, trait-growers, vegetable gardeners, poultry and bee-keepers are men who give each their best thoughts and efforts to some one of these branches, all of which are but divisions of agriculture, and may be carried on by the same person, but to just that extent in which one becomes thoroughly a master of either branch may be expect superior results. It is by exclusive at tention to the growth and culture of different plants that new and improved varieties are produced; and the same also in regard to improved breeds of animals. Special tarming is attended with more than ordinary risk, and yet results are often at ained that amply repay all the previous care and expense. It is not a bus ness in which many are called to engage, but the benefits derivel from it in general agriculture are of the greatest value and importance.

Feeding Salt to Cows.

Some farmers feed excessive quantiles of salt to mileh cows to induce them to drink heavily, and thus hoping to ine e se the flow of the milk. This often acts in the opposite direction. The philosophy of it is that the cows suffers from scours in the effort of nature to throw off the irritating substance, and meantime the flow of milk is diminished; smaller dises of salt stimulate secre tions of all the fluids of the body, of course including milk. When supply of salt is withdrawn the milk supply fails to its usual standard. There is no way to make a cow give more milk for any length of time by compelling her to drink water. On the other hand, if the ow is ted with green or steamed food, or that containing a due proportion of moisture, the increased flow of milk will be kept up so long as the cow will eat it or until other demands divert her feed to different uses .- Farm, Stock and Home.

Very Natural Mistake.

He was a Western senator, not used o fashionable ways, and was a guest at Washington balt. Entering a large rilliantly illuminated suite, he sudlenly stopped, backed toward the door, and in hornfied tones exclaimed:

"My stars, I've made a mistake!" "My dear senator Blank," said the ostess, hurrying toward him, "what's matter? You look til."

"O, nothing, nothing, only I am such dolt I came very near entering this apartment by mistaks. Please pardon ne and show me the way to the ball

"Why, Senator, this is the ball-room What did you think it was?"

"The-the ladies' dressing-room," murmured the Senator, mopping the perspiration from his brow.

Tired and Languid Women. How many women there are of whom hese words are true: "They feel languid and tired, hardly able to bear their weight on their teet, the bloom all gone from their cheeks, irratable and cross without meaning to be, nerves all upset, worried with the children, fretted over little things, a burden to themselves, and yet with no acute disease." What a pity it is. But a few bottles of Parker's Tonic will drive all this away, and relieve the troubles peculiar to their sex.

The British government is making a mischievous mistake in deciding to push in Parliament the renewal of the lrish crimes act. Even the pruning of the act of many tyrannical features will not conciliate the Irish or their representatives in the Commons, and the government may now count on the constant opposition of the Irish members, while they will have but a half-hearted M. W. DUNHAM support from a considerable part of the liberals. This is the triumph of Earl Spencer, the lord lieutenant of Ireland, and the bitter Vernor Harcourt, over the wiser judgment of Gladstone as well as the radical Chamberlain. The hollow humbug of the recent tour of royalty through Ireland is illuminated by this decision; the Irish might have believed that it meant something had reasonable treatment followed—had the promised bills for local government and for the purchase of land been introduced and the crimes act been allowed to lapse.

The accident to Gen. Sheridan on his western tour is a very serious matter, writes Mr. Hudson, editor of the Army and Navy Register. There has been for a year past an undercurrent of fear in the minds of his friends that the lieutenant-general was in dangerof becoming a serious sufferer from weakness of his digestive organs. He is a man of intense and emotional nature, whose vitality is drawn upon more rapidly than most men's. He is still a young man, but lately turned 50, with 10 full years of command of the army before him should be survive. A tew weeks ago he was talking about the arrangements for Grant's funeral, and now he is hurrying home from the Pacific coast with his own health seriously threatened.

CARL SCHURZ has written a pamphlet, called "The New South," in which he labors to show that the restoration of that section of the Union to lovalty and general good behavior was thoroughly accomplished by the election of a Democratic President last fall; and now the Sourthern Democratic papers are cruelly suggesting that he ought to explain why he helped to postpone such a happy consummation from 1876 to 1881 by devoting his shining abiliti s to the vindication of the 'great fraud,' and drawing a big salary as a member of Hayes' Cabinet.

WHEN Matthews was brutally murdered at the polls in Hazelburst, Copiah County, Miss., in 1883, it will be remembered, the Democratic Club of the county held a meeting and indorsed the killing in a series of spirited and emphatic resolutions. In searching for a man to take the place of the "offensive partisan" who is now Postmaster at Hazelhurst, the Administration has hit upon the Chairman of that meeting, and appointed him to the office. It is proper to add that preference would undoubtedly have been given to the man who committed the morder but for the fact that he has already been "recognized" by election to a good local
